To Mrs. Ruth Lee

In recognition of her services to the student body—
In acknowledgment of her steadfast efforts to better the school—In appreciation of her consistent good will and cheerfulness toward everyone—we, the staff, dedicate the Terror Trail
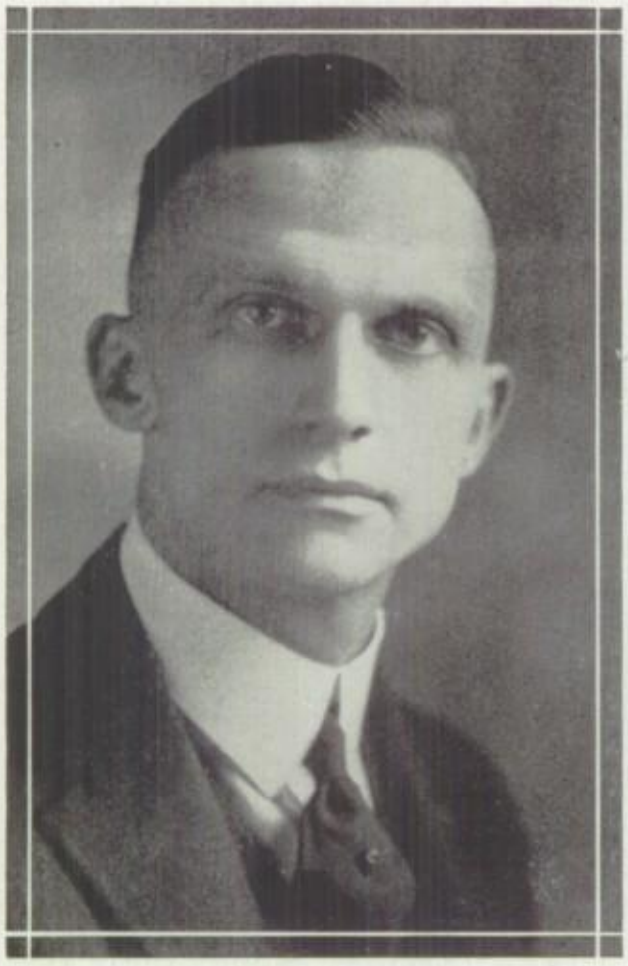
for 1932



I am quite as eager as are the students and faculty to see the 1932 Terror Trail. A school annual is always a source of pleasure since it chronicles so many happy events and associations. The book brings us joy while we are in school but as the years pass and our pathways diverge and separate us, the Annual is a veritable store house of cherished memories.

It is my hope that this Annual will record for each student the achievements and friendships of high school days which will inspire fond memories in years to come.

I congratulate the staff of the 1932 Terror Trail upon the completion of a task well done.

Cordially yours,

H. M. CORNING,
Superintendent of Schools.

To the members of the Terror Trail staff of '32 and to all Terrors—Greeting.

I am looking forward with interest to the issuance of the new maps and plans that will describe the latest Terror Trail.

In this publication I am confident that you will support with credit the customs and traditions so happily established and so ably maintained by Terrors of the past. From the work necessary by the members of the staff to produce this Annual will continue to come many rewards of satisfaction and pleasure after the actual labors are over. From the many memories here made permanent all Terrors of '32 will draw increased enjoyment as the years separate them further and further from the scenes of their high school days.

May the newer "trails" which you are about to explore prove to be filled with true happiness and the satisfaction of a useful and joyous life.

Very truly yours,

ROY J. WASSON, Asst. Supt.

Some people will remember 1931-1932 as the time of depression. Not so those whose high school days are written up and pictured in this book. One has his ups and downs, even in C. S. H. S., but in general, school days are anything but depressing. And so this book—the story of our School for the year 1931-1932—is a cheerful tale. It will gladden many an hour for us all.

Cordially,

W. S. Roe.

For their wise guidance and friendly spirit we, the class of 1932, wish to extend our appreciation and gratitude to our class supervisors,

Miss Marjorie O'Brien

and

Class Song

(To the Tune of "Save Your Sorrow")

Days of gladness,
Some of sadness,
We have lived and learned
Work is play
To all of those who know,
Live today,
Tomorrow onward go.

We'll be turning,
Thoughts of learning,
To more worldly ways.
Time can scatter,
But no matter,
Here's to H. S. days.

CLAUDIA WEBSTER.
GERALDINE SHIVELY

Class Poem

It's here the story ends. We slam the doors
Of lockers, where a ghost had been before,
And now another ghost. Three years have made
A hall with doors seem more than other halls
And corners out of walls seem commonplace,
And almost too familiar. From here we go
A way that's new and full of promises.
And shall we close the door on memories
Of three years past, too full for reckoning,
Or leave it just ajar, for slipping back
To walk the halls and talk with friends again?

SILVIA GOODENOUGH.

Class History

EVENTS FROM THE DIARY OF AN UNKNOWN SOLDIER

Historical Note:—The following incidents were taken from a diary found in the cellar of an old colonial farmhouse near Yorktown. The dates of entry show it to have been written by a soldier in Washington's Army.

September 3, 1929—Enlisted with 300 other green recruits.

October 1929 to June 1930—Plenty of hard drilling from Senior Officers, and Top-Sergeants Jackson and O'Brien. Troops are becoming accustomed to their duties and surroundings.

September 2, 1930—Regiment back from extended leave. Troops are all in high spirits, and drill of previous years shows up in the improved obedience of the whole regiment. After roll call, the following troopers were promoted to officer's positions: General, Newcomer; Major, Worth; Quartermaster-General, Ragle; Officer of the Day, Dentan.

November 21, 22, 23, 1930—By way of entertainment of the whole army, the 32nd Regiment presented a farce, The Radio Mystery.

February 1930—Engaged in war games with the 31st Regiment and were beaten, although we showed up well considering that it was our first experience of the kind.

May 15, 1931—Entertained 31st Regiment at a ball which was a great success.

June 8, 1931—Three months' leave given.

September 8, 1931—Intensive training started in preparation for big attack which is set for June 9, 1932. Promotion of officers: General, Lennox; Major, Willis; Quartermaster-General, Thomas; Officer of the Day, Cogswell.

January 19 to 21, 1932—Three days' battle against armies of King Examination in which several were killed and many wounded.

February 26, 1932—Honored our Commander-in-Chief by giving a pageant of his life. It was well received by the entire army.

April 1932—Troop disguised as children took possession of the fort and routed the forces of Old Man Time, without a single casualty.

April 1932—Regiment went A. W. O. L. for a day. Superior officers were powerless to stop them.

May 15, 1932—Regiment entertained by 33rd Regiment at a formal ball which was greatly enjoyed by all.

May 27, 1932—Troops called out of the ranks and awarded medals for bravery and service.

June 9, 1932—Final big battle. Victory!!

Last Will and Testament of the Class of 1932

Robert Phelps, the 999th, an archaeologist by profession, considered himself on the road to an important discovery. For weeks he had been excavating in the ruins of an old mound on the prairie, under which he knew was the ancient city of Colorado Springs.

At present, his shovel he lustily used to best advantage in some disintegrated red brick, now deteriorated to red powder. By chance one of his hefty shovelfuls brought to light a rusted metal box, from which he immediately cleaved the lid.

Inside lay an official looking document which stated: We THE SENIOR CLASS OF COLORADO SPRINGS HIGH SCHOOL, YEAR OF 1932, being of sound and disposing memory (most of us anyway) do hereby make, publish and declare this, our last Will and Testament.

I. To the remaining classes we give the privilege of climbing the fire escape. (Just try it.)

II. Mary Jean MacDonald leaves to Dorothy Weaver her place as the "Blond about school."

III. To Mr. Hedbloom we give the right to adopt Mr. Jackson's mode of cutting his hair.

IV. Jimmie O'Brien, for a consideration (to be fixed between the two) leaves to Jack Thomas his place as the busiest boy.

V. Bill Sode leaves to J. Ross his title of most conceited boy.

VI. Hope Kimzey gives, devises and bequeaths to Mr. Roe the right to bestow her distinguished title "Kowhide" on the person he sees fit.

VII. Hod Armentrout leaves to the next president of the Honor Society the privilege of trying to put some semblence of life into it.

VIII. To the remaining classes we leave the privilege of enjoying themselves just as we did while in C. S. H. S.

We hereby appoint Phelps the 1st, executor of this our last Will and Testament.

In witness whereof, we have hereunto set our hand and seal this 10th day of June, A. D. 1932.

WITNESSES: SENIOR CLASS. [SEAL]

BERT HAMILTON

" 'Tis priceless," blubbered Robert Phelps 999th. "To think that I should come upon a document mentioning my dear, dear ancestors. I shall keep it unto my dying day whereupon my son and his son in turn may keep it free from harm," said he drying his tears, not once giving thought to the real object of the masterpiece. (Or is there any?)

I'm really getting a break in life after all in the first to write this page. Best wishes Madeline Beasley

Junior Class History

After the present Junior class, which entered C. S. H. S. in September 1930, had become sufficiently acquainted with the school and each other, they elected their officers to serve for their Junior Year. Early in this year they presented the Junior Farce, "It Won't Be Long Now," which was a success, both as a work of dramatic art, and as a financial project.

They displayed their ability and enthusiasm by defeating the Seniors in the Activity Ticket Contest which is a part of the Junior-Senior Contest, most of which is held in the spring.

Kid Day

It was the fifteenth of April.
It was Arbor Day.
The Kids were all in kindergarten.
I fell down and skinned my knee.
We ate our lunch in the Gym-nas-i-um.
We listened to a nice program.
Everybody liked the parade.
They laughed at us so, I know they liked it.
Some of the teachers bothered us and tried to teach us to read.
Freddie's mama spanked him because he tore his pants.
Everybody was tired.
My mama said we played too hard.

Pikers' Day

The Seniors' bluff wuzn't called, so the pot wuz theirs. (I heerd some sour dough say there wuz too many "Queens" in the Seniors' cards, anyway). Wall, anyhow, the prize wuz the right ter hit fer the wide open spaces fer a day, on their own. (Bartender just tol' me it wuz called a "Sneak Day"). Wall, the Seniors shore wanted it bad, and by jimminy, they got it. Ef you don't think there wuz some 'citement in their ranks, wall I do. But the school "bored" warn't gonna stand fer to have the charge of all them three hundred and fifty-some youngsters rip-roaring on their own. So the parents took over the rasponsibility. Them Seniors had it fixed up so they'ud grab a day and set out on their own stakes. (Ten to one some uv 'em don't even get up till past nine bells in the fo'noon. That's turrible!) Wall I hope they had a good time, an I wish 'em luck.

—Grizzly Ike.

Class Day

On May 20, approximately 350 graduating seniors filed into the gymnasium, there to listen to the reading of the class history, will, and prophecy, and to the rendition of the class poem and song by their respective authors. The president of the class, William Lennox, presented the gift of the class to the school. The most important event of the afternoon came when Esther Powers, Editor-in-Chief of the Terror Trail, presented copies of the book to Mrs. Ruth Lee, to whom it was dedicated, and to those students who had won them as prizes in the various contests held in connection with the compiling of the annual.

Brown and White Day

Brown and White Day was originated in 1926 and is one of the most important events of the school year. At this time the officers of the Student Body for the ensuing year are installed in a most impressive way. Following this, honors for scholastic, forensic, dramatic, athletic and musical achievement are awarded as well as honors for service and leadership. The highest honors which can be awarded are the Roll of Honor Awards, which go to a chosen few of the upper five per cent of the class who have been outstanding in scholarship, leadership, citizenship, and service. The Hall of Fame award is given to the two or three who are exceptionally outstanding in the above points.

The mothers of Juniors and Seniors add to the occasion by serving a picnic lunch at noon or a dinner in the evening.

Homecoming

The fourth annual Homecoming was held on October 23, 1931. In the afternoon at an assembly in the gym Mr. O. E. Hemenway and Mr. Russell Law, both graduates of C. S. H. S., spoke to the students. That evening, a pep meeting was held at the Cossitt Stadium with a huge bonfire and spirited music from the band. After refreshments had been served, the students piled onto trucks provided for the purpose and paraded through town, working up pep for the Centennial game next day.

Music Contests

Each year our Band, Orchestra, and Glee Clubs have been well represented at the State Music Contest held in Denver. Each year we have been fortunate enough to obtain several first as well as second places. This year our groups will again enter and, we hope, with even more success. The fact that all these groups are very well trained by competent leaders gives us good grounds on which to base our hopes.

Masque and Sandal Tournament

During the second week of April, Masque and Sandal attended the State Tournament in Denver and presented a one act historic play, "Little Father of the Wilderness" by Austin Strong. This interesting play is set in Versailles, France, in the time of Louis XV, and is a pathetic play, revealing the life and attitudes of the French nobility.

This play was sent to Denver to win more than a prize; it was sent to win the laurels of experience which are often of more worth, and harder to win than the prize.

Notwithstanding the fact that the play was well written and that there was a wide variety of excellent talent to choose from, C. S. H. S. did not expect to win a prize, as either a comedy or a tragedy usually obtain it, but they felt that the experience would be worth the effort.

As this annual went to press before the tournament, the outcome was not known, but it was certain that the production would be one complimentary to C. S. H. S.

Masque and Sandal Play

"The Goose Hangs High" very efficiently revealed the talent of the members of Masque and Sandal who presented this play December 16-17-18, 1931.

Each year a play is presented by this organization and the proceeds are used to send players to Denver for the State Tournament.

The directors were Miss Rowena Hampshire and Miss Lillian Johnson.

This play was written as justification of the present generation. It was fast moving, dealing with a father who through political graft was forced to resign his job, making it impossible for his son and daughter to go back to college. The interest of the play centered in these two, and in the way they met the situation.

The cast was as follows:

Bernard Ingals	Richard Rodgers
Eunice Ingals	Ruth Antrim
Noel Derby	John Young

The Inter-Society Debate

The only inter-society debate of the year was held March 3, between the only boys' societies, Delphian and Philomathic. The Delphians delivered the affirmative and the Philomathians the negative on the question: Resolved, that the several states should enact legislation providing for compulsory unemployment insurance. The Philomathians, in order, were John Keller, Robert Scheihing, and Wendell Carlson, while Martin Legere, Horace Armentrout, and John Young, in that order, upheld the honor of Delphian. The decision was 3-0 in favor of Delphian.

A new, large cup has been procured this year for the inter-society contests, and in order to be won, it must be taken three years in succession. The winning society each year is decided by the number of points they have. The points are awarded as follows: The debate counts two points; on Literary Night, the extemperaneous speeches, the orations, and the essays each bring one point to the winner; and one point is awarded the winning basketball team. Both societies are striving to get this cup for the first year. Last year the cup became the permanent possession of Delphian.

The Junior Farce

IT WON'T BE LONG NOW

By Milton Herbert Gropper

This farce deals with the amusing situation of a stingy young millionaire who was told he had but twenty-four hours to live. After he had given away almost everything he owned, and had insulted the town's political machine to its face, he found that he had been the victim of a trick played by his friends. The outcome sees him nominated for mayor on the people's party, and happier than he had ever been before in his life, in spite of his lost wealth.

Senior Play

WASHINGTON, THE MAN WHO MADE US

By Percy MacKaye

The Senior Play for 1932 was something new, a Chronicle Play, the largest scale, and most expensive production ever attempted in C. S. H. S. It is also unique in its songs, dances, and style. The play was produced with the assistance of Mrs. R. J. Gilmore, Miss Minnie Rosenthal, Mrs. William Hodgson, and Mr. Felton who aided Miss Hampshire, Miss O'Brien, and Mr. Jackson.

The play opens with the appearance of Quilloquon, an old man, and a small boy and girl on the stage of a theater before an inner curtain. They ask Masks, which appear, where the play is held. After talking with a character representing the theater, they find there is to be no play. So Quilloquon says he will put on a ballad play for the children. While he plays and sings, Mount Vernon appears in the background and some Colonial Maidens enter the scene while Quilloquon and the children hurry off. The play now progresses, revealing the life and character of Washington. The play is composed of eleven actions, which are as follows:

(1) Prologue, (2) Scene at Mount Vernon, (3) Wedding celebrations of Washington, (4) Mob Scene, (5) Washington leaves for the wars, (6) Delaware River, (7) Valley Forge, (8) Philadelphia, (9) Yorktown, (10) Washington spurns throne offered him by war-sick officers, (11) Finale at Mount Vernon.

Terror Tribe

Terror Tribe is the honor-service organization of the school. Anyone earning fifty points in service to the school may become a member with the right to wear the brown and white Terror Tribe jacket. By earning 175 points, a member may wear a "C".

The organization sponsored Home-Coming, for which it built two bonfires, one presumably for private celebration, as only a select few saw it. It decorated and ushered for the Carol Service and was in charge of decorating for football and basketball games. The president and vice-president were marshals at the Christmas Convocation. The officers form the Boosters' Committee, while the president is Head Booster in the S. O. Cabinet.

The Lever

The Lever staff in '31 and '32 have attempted, not only to carry on the traditions begun in 1884, but also to improve the service that the paper renders to the school. In this, assisted by the art and business departments, they have been reasonably successful.

Mr. Bischof has always been an able and willing guide to the staff. Mr. Fowler, also, has cooperated whenever possible. To both of these the staff extends its heartfelt thanks.

In accordance with its policy of supporting all worthwhile school enterprises, the Lever has played an important part in the success of many activities.

Twice during the school year the staff gave programs in assembly to stimulate interest in the paper.

During the first semester several staff members attended the press convention held in Boulder under the auspices of Colorado University.

Early in the spring the staff began a series of weekly programs over station KVOR in which various school organizations were presented.

The training which journalistic endeavor offers has been of unestimable value to the staff, and they commend it to the students who are yet to enter school activities.

Band

Last year the band won a close second in the State Contest in Denver; this year they will again enter the Contest, and it is hoped with even more success.

The band rendered its services in the Band, Orchestra and Glee Club Concert given at the City Auditorium. They also marched in several parades, including the Armistice Parade and Washington's Birthday Celebration, and aided in celebrations and the games as usual.

Colorado Springs High School's champion orchestra gave its services again this year by playing at drama presentations and by giving concerts. It contributed to the Washington bicentennial celebration by giving a concert for the public.

This year the orchestra has done even better than in the past years. Several Terror musicians were sent to the National High School Orchestra in Cleveland, Ohio. Those attending were: Marybel Poer, Margaret Kelley, Geraldine Wilkey, Mary Conover, Leland Feldt, Clifford Williams, and John Innes.

Girls' Glee Club

One of the most interesting organizations in the musical class of Colorado Springs High School is the Girls' Glee Club. Their most important public appearance, in co-operation with the Boys' Glee Club, was the Convocation service held at the Shove Memorial Chapel during the Christmas season. They appeared in the Christmas Carol Service, and, in several small groups, at a number of different churches and clubs. Two members of the club were accepted for the National High School Conference. The Glee Club participated in the High School Vaudeville given at the Auditorium, and the Southern Colorado Festival held at Pueblo.

Boys' Glee Club

Programs by the Glee Club were given in assemblies, Convocation Services at Shove Chapel, Christmas Carol Services, the Armistice Day Program, Washington's Birthday Program at the city auditorium, and several others. It assisted in the Senior Play, various Senior members being Colonial characters. A group of sixteen from the Boys' and Girls' Clubs gave several programs outside of the school, while the Combined Glee Clubs took part in the Colorado Music Festival at Pueblo.

Due to the newly installed system of shorter periods held daily, better results were obtained. The regularity of training is producing a set of voices which make a more balanced ensemble, and in this way, gave more interest, not only to the individual members, but also to its audiences. It is apparent that the new system has given us better vocalists for the future.

Beta Phi Literary Society

Last fall, Beta held a candle-light service for the initiation of new members. Both the members and pledges were much impressed by it. A mock-initiation provided amusement for all.

The study for the year has been travel and some very interesting programs have been arranged.

At Christmas a basket of food was given to a needy family. A most attractive program is put on by the girls on Mother's Day.

Beta Phi will do her share in the All-Society Dance this year.

Not caring to continue literary programs, the members of Sigma changed their society to a social society. They have given it over almost entirely to charitable work. Zeta

When Zeta was organized in 1905, it was with a fourfold purpose: to promote social life, to further literary activities, to be philanthropic, and to strengthen school spirit. This program has been successfully carried out through the years.

During the past year three social meetings were held, and guests were invited to all. At Christmas time, food, clothing, and toys were sent to the needy, and the members supported all such projects initiated by the school.

During the last two years the members of Zeta have come to feel that there is no longer the place in the life of the school for the literary society that there had been. So many other organizations of all sorts have come into being to encroach upon the field formerly occupied by these societies alone, that Zeta decided to withdraw from the life of the school. Accordingly, no new members were taken in this year, and when the present ten members, who are all seniors, graduate, one of the oldest societies for girls in C. S. H. S. will cease to be.

The Girl Movement is a National Organization sponsored by the Y. W. C. A. for girls between the ages of twelve and eighteen. There are Girl Reserves in about fifty different countries. We have about two hundred and fifty thousand Girl Reserves in the United States alone. Girls' Athletic Association

The Girls' Athletic Association was formed for the purpose of furthering girls' athletics in the school. Any girl who has earned fifty points and has a B plus posture grade may apply for membership, but must receive a unanimous vote of the members before she may be admitted. The organization has at least two initiation hikes a year, besides other hikes and picnics. In the spring the club sponsors Play-day, to which representatives from all the county schools are invited. There is always a banquet some time in May as a windup to the year's activities.

Beta Lambda

Beta Lambda was organized so that students interested in a more thorough study of Biology might carry the work further.

This year the Club has taken a number of field trips, gathering insects, plants and other things of interest. There was also the inside laboratory work, and a visit to the museum.

For the first time letters are awarded for participation in golf. Last year the team won the championship of the South Central league of Colorado. These matches were sponsored by the local club and held at Patty Jewett field and at Pueblo. Last fall the Terror golfers won three matches and lost but one. This defeat was the first the team has suffered in two seasons of competition. This spring a tournament will be held to determine the school champion. Other tournaments are also planned with Central and Centennial.

Tennis

Although Mr. Bischof, sponsor of the Tennis Club, experienced some difficulty in getting out of town matches this year, a tournament was held in Pueblo on October 15. Excellent playing on the part of Williams and Sheehan was shown in the singles, but Thomas who had just come into first place on the squad the day before the matches, was decidedly off his game. The C. S. H. S. Racketeers lost to the Central Wildcats by a score of 4-3. The defeat was attributed for the most part to poor playing in the doubles, all of which were lost.

However, in a return match held at Monument Valley Park on Saturday, October 24, accounts were squared. Before the onslaught of Williams, Thomas and Sheehan in the singles, the Wildcats were overcome by a score of 4-3. As before, weakness was shown in the doubles; hence it was only through the brilliant playing of Thomas, that Sawhill of Central was conquered in what later proved to be the deciding match of the series.

The scores were as follows:

PUEBLO MATCH

Thomas lost to Evans 0-6; 3-6. Williams beat Sawhill 6-2; 6-2. Sheehan beat Walker 6-2; 6-8; 6-3. Borden beat Deems 6-2; 6-4. Gustafson and Vasseur lost to Dellaquadrie and Fisher 2-6; 1-6. McMahan and Dickison lost to Rhodes and Porter 2-6; 6-4; 4-6. Anderson and Bates lost to Lauchner and Naylor 3-6; 3-6.

COLORADO SPRINGS MATCH

Williams defeated Evans 6-3; 6-0. Thomas defeated Sawhill 6-3; 6-4. Sheehan defeated Walker 6-2; 6-1. Borden defeated Deems 6-3; 6-1. Naylor and Muckley defeated Vasseur and Colton 6-1; 6-2. Rhodes and Porter defeated McMahan and Dickerson, 6-4; 3-6; 7-5. Fisher and Gibbon defeated Thomas and Gustavson 7-5; 7-5.

Football

Under the tutelage of Coach Preston the Terrors completed a highly successful season. Losing only one game, they placed second in the South Central league. Sinton, Varrone, and Perryman were chosen on the All-South Central league team.

Fort Morgan 0—Terrors 14

Favorably opening the season, the Terrors defeated Fort Morgan 14-0. Weak in passing, the Terrors resorted to power plays, and in this fashion they scored both touchdowns.

North Denver 0—Terrors 14

Still weak in passing, the Terrors defeated North Denver 14-0 in a game played at night. Every man on the team participated in routing North Denver.

South Denver 0—Terrors 19

After a scoreless first half, the Terrors came back into the second half with their famous triple-pass play clicking well enough to score 19 points. Although no touchdowns were made directly by the use of the play, it placed the team within easy scoring distance.

Salida 0—Terrors 20

The Terrors won their first league game 20-0 with Salida. The first touchdown came as a result of a long pass, and the other two as a result of blocked punts.

Central 12—Terrors 7

Weakened by injuries sustained in previous games, the Terrors were sent down to defeat by Central. Leading for three quarters 7-6, the Terrors were unable to stop Central from scoring a second touchdown.

Centennial 13—Terrors 21

The Terrors, using the triple pass, power plays, and forward passes, overwhelmed Centennial 21-13 in the sixth game of the season.

Canon City 0—Terrors 14

The highly-touted Canon boys were no match for the heavier Terrors. Canon City never threatened, while the Terrors, by the aid of the triple pass, constantly threatened the Canon goal line.

Basketball

The efforts of Coach Erps and his string of hard-fighting men have been crowned with unusual success for the year of 1931 and 1932. For the first time since 1920, the Terrors hold the highly prize title of State Champions. The championship was won after a season characterized by exceptionally fine playing on the part of a team which was not afraid to be one for all and all for one. As a result, out of eighteen regularly scheduled games, fifteen were won. Of these the last fourteen were won consecutively.

By reason of a slow breaking offense and a combination of zone and man-to-man defense the Terrors were enabled to win the championship of the South Central League with a score of six games won to two games lost. The triumphal march of the Terror men to the glory of being state champions was continued in the Divisional Tournament, held at Colorado Springs on March eleventh and twelfth, when all three of the tourney games in which the Terrors participated were won.

Reward, well deserved by a faithful Terror team, was finally bestowed upon the men of the Brown and White when the deciding game of the State Tournament was played against the Mancos Bluejays, whose fast breaking type of playing was more than matched by the deliberate style of offense developed by the thorough training of Coach Erps.

Altho twenty-three basketball men are enrolled, only fourteen are on the traveling squad. In the Divisional and State Tournaments the number was further reduced to ten and nine in the respective tourneys. In the divisional tournament the squad was composed of Pirnat, Riley, Sode, Neece, O'Neil, Eugene Gustavson, Borden, Ross, Frost, and Griffith. The line up for the State Tournament was the same with the exception of Ed Gustavson who took the place of Wayne Griffith and Hildreth Frost.

The Garden Elf

I fell asleep one afternoon—
I hadn't meant to doze—
A fairy came into my yard,
And sat upon a rose.

He talked of lands I didn't know
And many pleasant things;
He talked until the sky had turned
The color of his wings.

He sang the gayest little song
And danced upon his toes.
He sprinkled silver drops of dew
Into my best pink rose.

I heard the flutter of his wings
And heard his merry tune,
When I looked up I saw his face
Upon the rising moon.

—Margaret Warning.

North Fork

The buggy wheels spun in the sunlight bruising the wet
Ferns at the road's edge the horses ran in the sunlight
With the rattle of harness.

High in the morning sun the buggy wheels
Razored the road's edge quick as a steel
Band in the sunlight.

After the rain all night the ditches
Gleamed in the sun the red clay
Shone like pennies.

(Two ravines in the roadway
The clay was coral in the spokes).

—Robert Tallman.

At Delle

I had been shopping, if such it may be called, in a little village in south-eastern France. I was sitting just inside the quaint old tea-room having some refreshments. While the fat bustling old lady waited on me, serving a concoction of "my own and original, ma'amselle," I stared at the scenery out the large window beside my table. The sky was soft, turquoise blue, with wisps of fine clouds floating gently, softly in the void. They, and the smell of lilacs bursting into bloom reminded me of brides' veils and orange blossoms. The trees, lining the grey road, were budding. The sun spread a golden light over the green hills. The birds were singing with all their might. I looked around the shop. It was a cheerful old place, with an atmosphere corresponding to the out-doors. Five groups of chairs and tables were arranged neatly and symmetrically in accordance with the design of tile on the floor. Everything was shining with cleanliness. Then the curtain at the huge barred window at the front of the shop fluttered.

Madame was fussing about near my table when the two men entered. They were very interesting subjects to one who was interested in contrasts, as was I. One was blind, but his face, had it not been for a scar from one eye to the mouth, giving the face a curious one-sided look, would have been the type one sees on the kindly old grandfathers. The other's expression was hard, as if he had seen too much of life, but his eyes were very gentle as he helped his friend along.

In reply to my questioning glance, Madame nodded, but hurried off to seat them at the table before the other window, opposite me. She returned soon, however, and at my invitation, sat down. I opened the conversation, nodding toward the men across the room.

"Poor fellow, that blind one. He lost his eyesight in the War, I suppose? Do they live here?"

"Oui, ma'amselle. The boys lived here before the War came and they answered the call of their fatherland. Bec came through, but—"

"Hush," I interrupted. The blind one was reciting a poem with a voice soft, sweet and emotional. I caught only the last verse, but it was enough to recognize the poem, for I also had learned it.

"Dieu parle, il faut qu'on lui reponde.
Le seul bien qui me reste au monde
Est d'avoir quelquefois pleuré."

Tristesse! Sadness! How that poem brought back memories. In a flash I saw a young Frenchman, brave and handsome, held prisoner in my father's house, teaching me "Tristesse." It is true he was not really a prisoner at our home, but my father, being unable to run the farm with only one arm, had kept him to help. Luckily our home was far from the front, or I know he would have tried to escape before he did. "Tristesse" held for me the memory of the happy hours I had spent with him while learning it. But he hated me, as he did my father, because we were German. And what Frenchman did not? I was quite young at the time and when this love had come to me it seemed to be so much greater than it really was. First loves always do. But he had escaped one night. For nearly a year I was fearful lest something had happened to him; but what, I dared not guess.

At the end of that year a new love came to me. Not as great as the first, to be sure, but a love, nevertheless. And the second died. Then recklessly I forswore all love and began, several years ago, traveling for stories and articles for a certain magazine.

I suppose I started as Madame laid her moist hand over mine and said, softly, "What is it, child? Does that poem make you sad, as it does me?"

I looked at her with a somewhat faint and far-away smile. I suppose. "No, it's the memories." There was a pause. Then I jerked myself back to reality. "Do you think they'd mind if I went over and talked to them? I'd like to hear the blind one's story. I think it would make a good article. These war tragedies are still good for at least one page. Is it all right?"

"Certainement, ma'amselle. It is seldom young people come here and very few take an interest in the boys. I believe that he, although not talkative, will tell you his story. Of course, there is not much difference between his and that of most of the others who fought and lost their sight. Come."

She got up, slowly and ponderously, and walked over to their table. I followed. "Garcons, ma'amselle wishes the story of the blindness." Then to me: "Sit here."

I sat down. There were no introductions, because none were needed. Ours was merely an informal little talk.

The blind one fumbled for his friend's hand. When he found it he drew him close and whispered, not unexcitedly, "What does she look like? Who is she, Bec?" Appearances always come first to a Frenchman.

I interrupted him with a weak little laugh. That laugh sounded sacrilegious in the face of his expression. "Ah, monsieur," I said, "I am an old hag. I have long, straggly, matted hair flopping out from beneath an old hat that I have picked up in the streets. My nose is long and hooked. My eyes are red from drinking too much wine. My lips are quirking in a diabolical smile at the thought—"

"Ah, ma'amselle," Madame remonstrated delicately, "is that a way—is it kind to treat a poor man so?" She turned to him. "No, boy, she is everything she says she is not. Isn't it true, Bec? And isn't it unkind of her to tease our blind one? Poor thing, soon he will lose all his faith in womankind."

The blind boy, in his turn, laughed—about nothing at all. "Do you mind if I find out for myself what you look like?" Without waiting for my answer, he leaned across the table. The next thing I knew his long soft fingers were gliding over my features. He sat down, suddenly, and smiled. "You are right, Madame. She is everything she says she is not. I shall be glad to tell my story to her." He paused, then: "Ma'amselle, your voice is familiar. Do I not know you?"

I shook my head, forgetting that he could not see. He could not know me. I had never seen—but wait; he did look familiar. It was—oh, it couldn't be. He had said he would be glad to tell his story to me. Either it was one of my Jacque's friends or else Jacque was intending to torture me. But he couldn't. This couldn't be he. It is true he once said he loved me, but that was the time I was so very ill. He probably said it only because my father commanded it. But the blind man was talking.

". . . And the little minx was in love with me. Me, an enemy of her and her country. Oh, this philosophy, this irony of fate. It seems everyone wants the thing or person he can't have. Well, one night I escaped. I crept into the field when the father was in the house to look after his daughter. I was soon out of sight of them. After that, the going was easy. That is, it was easy for me to get away, but two months later, in a surprise raid, I lost my eyesight and got this wound." He touched the scar. "When I came out of the hospital, I was 'out of luck,' as the Americans say. I had no idea where I had been held prisoner; that is, I did not know the location of the house. With my sight gone I had no way to hunt for it, even if I had wished to return."

"I had met my friend Bec at the hospital, where he had been for a minor operation on his leg. He came back home with me on his leave. Then he went back, only to be demobilized. We have been living here since that time. You can make a good article of that, ma'amselle?"

"Yes," I answered. "But one question, please. Did you love this girl?"

"Mon Dieu, never. Why, I had the only girl waiting here for me. But there was no need to be unhappy during my stay. I made the best of the situation. I took what I could get and liked it. There was nothing else to do. But my Mimi! She had been true to me, even though I am blind. She just came back last month and we are to be married so very soon."

"Monsieur, what would you do if the girl turned up and demanded you for her own? Declared that you had asked her to marry you? Would your Mimi then marry you? Would your soldier's honor compel you to marry her? Answer me, please."

"I suppose if she declared it was my duty," he replied, looking straight at my face with his sightless eyes, "and could prove that it was so, I should give up Mimi and marry the other. But she won't. She isn't that kind, that would want me to give up my only happiness."

"Well," I said, rising, "I must be going now. I shall keep your story in mind. Au 'voir."

I went out a little faster than was absolutely necessary. Perhaps he was right. I think I would rather he married Mimi. Then in a flash I realized that I would not. I was jealous of Mimi. I still loved him. The first love always sticks with one. I would always love him.

As I strolled alone everything seemed changed. The skies had turned grey. The flowers were closing. All, including Love, were hiding their beauty from me. I could never tell him I was the girl he had owned. I couldn't tell him he was the man I had loved and would always love. He hated me. I would and could sacrifice my happiness for his. The ground blurred before my eyes and I got into my car and slowly drove off, each moment taking me farther away from the little French village of Velle that held all my happiness.

A Fable

And there came down to C. S. H. S. a sophomore girl who was passing fair, and spoke fluently about nothing but did it well. And her face was as fair as her figure, yea, and her figure could not be overlooked.

Thereupon, there followed her around the halls clouds upon clouds of male students. And they asked her for dates and she gave them dates.

And they asked her for more dates and she gave them.

And so it passed, that she went merrily on her way, being tremendously popular, receiving low grades and having a good time.

Then certain junior girls who were less popular and less beautiful, came to her and spake thus, "My dear, you must hear this."

And they warned her about certain male students, and they made cutting remarks to her.

Then they spake ill of her behind her back.

And they shewed their jealousy in a hundred ways. And behold, she was disheartened.

And the year passed.

And she came the next year and was a junior.

Now the next year there came unto C. S. H. S. a sophomore girl who was passing fair and spoke fluently about nothing but did it well. And her face was as beautiful as her figure, yea, even more beautiful than the popular sophomore of the previous year.

Thereupon, there followed her about the halls clouds upon clouds of male students.

And they asked her for dates and she gave them dates.

And they asked for more dates and she gave them.

Thus she went merrily on her way, receiving low grades and having a good time.

Then certain of the junior girls who were less beautiful and less popular spoke unto her. And the girl who had been a popular sophomore before was among them.

And they warned her about certain male students, telling her the same old story and shewing their jealousy in the same old way. And the blah of their voices filled the air.

And it was ever thus and always will be.
